THE CLOSING DAY FOR REGISTRATION

THE FINAL OPPORTUNITY IS NOW.

Some Remarks Concerning a Democratic Charge of Crookedness.

This is the last day for registration for the election of delegates to the constitutional convention. If the name of any voter has not been registered at midnight, he will not be a voter at the coming election. A checking up of the lists shows that a great many of the republican voters are not yet registered but it is hoped that all of them may be gathered in today.

The office of Justice Johnstone will be open all day for the eleventh hour voter. The democratic workers yesterday continued the charges which they have been making that hundreds of so-called "cholos" that is, irresponsible natives of Mexico who have never been naturalized have been registered. It is pointed out that if that is so, the democrats know it better than anybody else for all the registration officers who have been appointed are democrats.

There is only one republican official with whom voters in Phoenix can register and that is Justice Johnstone. He has registered no "cholos." His lists are open for inspection by democrats or republicans and it will be found that every man whom has registered is a citizen with a right to vote. The address of every man is given so that those who desire to investigate his right can easily do so.

It is therefore plain that if there has been any crooked registration, as the democratic workers assert, it must have been done by the democrats.

DEATH CAME QUICKLY TO RAY C. KEITH

His Life Went Out as a Flash Yesterday Afternoon.

Ray C. Keith who kept a store on North Tenth street in Brill addition died suddenly yesterday afternoon at 216 East McKinley street where he had been living for the last three years.

He came to Phoenix about six years ago from Caldwell, O., a sufferer of tuberculosis though the disease had not advanced to a great extent. His health seemed to improve and during the last two years he had taken on an appearance of robustness though he was subject to brief attacks of illness which indicated that the disease had not relinquished its hold upon him.

Yesterday morning he was feeling unusually well and was in more than ordinary cheerful spirits. He ate heartily of breakfast. He was employed about his store until half past twelve o'clock and after dinner he joked with friends. The first indication of his illness came in a sudden complaint of heat. Next he was seized with pains in the chest and he remarked that he would go out into the open air for a minute. He did so and almost immediately returned to the house with a knowledge that his end was at hand. He said: "I'm all in." And to a suggestion that a remedy would be sent for he said: "Nothing will do any good."

A messenger was sent for Dr. Wiley but before the doctor could reach him he was dead. The cause of death was the giving way of an artery weakened perhaps by an abscess and filling the pleural cavity. Though Mr. Keith had frequently consulted Dr. Wiley he had been only intermittently under his care, so that as the physician was not present at the time of his death, an inquest was held last night, the jury finding that death had resulted from natural causes.

Mr. Keith was thirty-two years of age. He had quite an extensive acquaintance in town and was liked for his warm heartedness. A telegram was sent to his parents at Caldwell informing them of his death.

WALTER ELLINGSON'S RISE IN THE WORLD

His Latest Promotion on the Salt Lake Route.

Walter Ellingson, a Phoenix boy, is rapidly climbing in the railroad world. Walter, when a boy in knee pants, began his business career as a carrier for the Republican fourteen years ago. Thence he drifted into telegraphy and at length he entered the service of the Santa Fe system. Later he became connected with the Salt Lake road at Los Angeles, rising steadily from one position to another until four years ago he was transferred to the general offices at Salt Lake. What has happened to him lately is told by one of the Salt Lake papers:

"J. W. Ellington, who has been chief clerk of the traffic department of the Salt Lake route ever since the road opened for through traffic in 1905, has been promoted to be contracting freight agent, the change being announced by the assistant general freight and passenger agent on Monday. It is effective at once, and C. M. Temple, who has been city ticket agent, becomes chief clerk of the office. Mr. Temple's place will be filled later on. Mr. Ellington has made a favorable impression upon the public ever since his promotion to be the chief clerk, and has friends all over the city in and out of railroad work. He is a young man, but thoroughly knows the railroad business. Mr. Temple is also well known in the local office and, barring the time he was agent at Milford, has been here for several years. Congratulations will be extended to both on their promotion."

TRoubles OF THE ANCIENTS. Alexander the Great was sighing because there were no more worlds to conquer.

"That, your majesty," cried his courtiers, "you'll have trouble enough in benevolently assimilating the various peoples you have conquered on this planet."

Forebly impressed with this idea, which had not occurred to him, Alexander brightened up and began to lay plans for enlarging the regular army.—Chicago Record-Herald.
